

Affiliate and Endorsement Requests

POLICY 7: EXTERNAL

The Australian College of Neonatal Nurses (ACNN) is the peak professional body for neonatal nurses throughout Australia. It promotes professional standards, networking, research and education. ACNN believes that neonatal nurses have a responsibility to carry out a high standard of individualised care for preterm, sick and recovering neonates within a family centred philosophy.

ACNN strongly advocates active collaboration and representation with organisations with a particular focus on perinatal and neonatal clinical care, education and research and clinical. This includes not-for-profit organisations and support groups for families of preterm and sick neonates. The work of ACNN and such organisations may overlap or be complementary.

Process

ACNN welcomes inquiries and/or applications from organisations for affiliate status and/or endorsement of a product or service. If an organisation seeks endorsement of a product or service, please contact the ACNN Secretary to discuss prior to submitting a proposal.

To apply for affiliate status, please provide a written letter outlining details including the organisation's philosophy and objectives and how the organisation is involved in perinatal, neonatal care and/or the support of families. Please email the letter to the National Secretary at secretary@acnn.org.au.

Provisions of affiliate status

Approved organisations are to provide a logo for listing on the ACNN website as an affiliate.

Approved organisations will be provided with the ACNN logo for the purpose of acknowledging affiliate status with ACNN. Further permission required from ACNN for all other use or promotion of ACNN.

ACNN reserves the right to confer the status of affiliate and restrict the use of ACNN's logo outside of approved permissions.

Affiliate status will be reviewed by ACNN every twelve months, and the outcome communicated with the organisation. ACNN reserves the right to remove the status of affiliate at any time.

Inquiries to the secretary@acnn.org.au